

Team SA hopes to improve medal haul in Birmingham

Country looks to swimming, rugby, netball in Commonwealth Games

By Athenkosi Tsotsi

SA hopes its strong contingency at the Commonwealth Games, which begin tomorrow in Birmingham, England, will dish out impressive performances in different codes.

National netball captain Bongi Msomi and para-swimmer Christian Sadie will be SA's flagbearers in the opening ceremony beginning at 10pm.

Team SA has always performed well in the Commonwealth Games. In the last edition, the 2018 Gold Coast Games in Australia, the team finished in sixth place after racking up a medal haul of 37.

Team SA hopes to surpass the 2018 medal haul, with representatives in over 20 sports codes. There's still an opportunity for last minute qualification for some, before the Thursday deadline.

We look at codes likely to bring home the bulk of the medals.

Swimming

In the last edition, swimming won 12 medals, Chad Le Clos and Tatjana Schoenmaker accounted for five gold medals between them. While Schoenmaker will be out to defend her 100m and 200m breaststroke titles, Le Clos will have some doubters due to his age. Youngsters Matthew Sates and Lara van Niekerk also have outside chances of getting medals.

Men's Rugby Sevens

The Blitzboks are going to Birmingham as the number one ranked team in the world.

Their head coach Neil Powell has selected a strong squad, showing every intention of getting gold.

SA sporting icon Doctor Khumalo said the Proteas are emerging as a force to be reckoned with, indeed he's right. The current crop of players is the best group netball has had. The players are playing at a high level overseas, which strengthens the national team.

Athletics

Track and field have always brought in a good number of medals over the years, but things are not looking good. The only realistic medal hopefuls were Akani Simbine, pictured, and Luxolo Adams but the latter has pulled out due to fatigue. Simbine is the defending 100m champion, he'll face tough competition from rival Kenya's Ferdinand Omanyala.
